- III. Translate the following passages into Chinese (60 points):

- 1. Acting recently as an expert witness in a murder trial, I became aware of a small legal problem caused by the increasingly multicultural nature of our society. According to English law, a man is guilty of murder if he kills someone with the intention either to kill or to injure seriously. But he is guilty of the lesser crime of manslaughter if he has been sufficiently provoked or if his state of mind at the time was abnormal enough to reduce his responsibility. The legal test here is a comparison with the supposedly ordinary man—the man on the Clapham omnibus, as the legal cliché has it. Would that ordinary person feel provoked under similar circumstances? Was the accused's state of mind at the time of the killing very different from that of an average man?
- 2. Sparkling or still? Spring or tap? Imported or domestic? Flavored or plain? There's nothing simple about a drink of water, now that the bottled stuff outsells both milk and beer in the United States. In just a couple of decades, we've become a nation awash in bottled water -- with tens of billions of plastic empties to prove it -- transforming the Drinking Fountain on a city street into a dated curiosity akin to the public telephone booth.

How one of life's basic necessities became a heavily marketed beverage in a plastic bottle is the subject of Elizabeth Royte's new book Bottlemania: How Water Went on Sale and Why We Bought It. Royte, an environmental journalist based in Brooklyn, N.Y., shares the many, sometimes bizarre, unintended consequences of cracking open that plastic seal.

IV. Translate the following passage into English (60 points):

陕西榆林红石峡

"来我们榆林,第一要看镇北台,第二要看红石峡。那红石峡都出了名了,专有摄制组上这儿拍电影哩!"在前往榆林的长途汽车上,两个当地人这么跟我们说。

既然如此,当然要去。不过,对当地人的"老王卖瓜"也做了一些思想准备。

却不料,红石峡果真是个了不得的去处!它竟然是陕西省内最大一处摩崖石窟群。但见峡谷两侧赭红色的岩壁上惊人地布满大大小小的石刻和洞窟,一条湍急的清流则在谷底刷刷地流淌。静静往那儿一站,立刻就被中华大地那千古的历史、文化以及大自然的熏风吹醉了!
